To the Voters:
Gentlemen:—Having been requested by members of both political parties to announce myself a candidate for the office of city clerk in the forthcoming municipal election, I hereby offer myself as a candidate for said office independent of party politics and entirely on my merits. I solicit the votes of the citizens on December 8th.

Respectfully,
ROBT. KELLAHIN

Ten days until election.

It now seems to be the train from the south that is behind time.

The Santa Fe Central is not making much noise, but rail laying is to begin in a very few weeks.

Financiers say that the flurry is over, and that General Prosperity will continue business at the old stand.

The first election of the city of Roswell will not be strenuously exciting. Preceding the election there seems to be a calm of unanimity.

Now that Rodey has introduced a sixth judicial bill he should push it. An introduction means very little, unless there is a little energy behind it to push it along.

With rain on the ranges, and fruit on the trees, and two new railroads into Roswell, 1904 promises to be a record breaker for good times and prosperity.

The registration books are now closed, and according to law the registry lists will be posted for six days. If your name is not on the list it is not yet too late to see that "it is written there."

More people in ill health came to town last night and to-day have been searching the town over for rooms. The men who who will at once put up a commodious sanitarium will not only be public benefactors, but their reward will be in visible dividends from the investment. Nine out of ten invalids who come to Roswell belong to the well-to-do class and are willing to pay liberally for accommodations.

Another Judicial District Necessary.

Delegate Rodey has introduced House Joint Resolution No. 1953 to provide for an additional associate justice of the territorial supreme court and the creation of an additional judicial district. It is hoped that the bill will become a law. A Sixth judicial district is very necessary, as much on account of the actual business for the five judicial district courts now existing, as well as absolutely demanded for better arrangement of judicial districts and to give the southeastern counties of the Territory a district by themselves. Unfortunately for the Territory, it takes about two days from any of the towns along the mountain and Rio Grande divisions of the Santa Fe Railway system, the principal railroad artery of the Territory, to reach the county seats of the counties of Chaves, Eddy and Roosevelt, which are among the growing and most rapidly advancing subdivisions of this commonwealth. With a Sixth judicial district, these counties would have a resident judge, which under present circumstances they cannot have. The bill is in all respects good and the sooner it becomes law, the better for the Territory.—New Mexican.

He Was a Good Son.

("Honor thy father and thy mother; that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee.")

You can almost draw a mental picture of the boyhood and the manhood of John A. Mooney, New Yorker. He is dead. In his will he left $1,000 to the college of St. Francis Xavier, New York, for a medal, to be awarded yearly to the undergraduate who will write the best essay on the social importance of the Fourth Commandment.

The will breathes filial affection. There is scarcely a bequest that is not made in behalf of the memory of father and mother. The man who made that will must have lived it.

You can see him as a boy, who was glad to be tied to his mother's apron strings. She represented to him all that was good. She shared his secrets and his sorrows. She healed his boyhood hurts with a kiss and his manhood disappointments with keen sympathy. She gloried in his achievements. In her eyes there never was such a boy, never such a young man. His affection for her was the tenderest and holiest thing in life. Some boys never grow away from their mothers. They make the best men.

And his father was his chum. It is written between the lines of that will. There was little bickering and scolding in their lives. There was wise counsel and cheerful obedience. As they grew up together they were more like brothers than father and son. They enjoyed the same sports, the same books. They placed a queen on a throne and both worshiped her. The boy believed his father was the sum and substance of all that was good and wise. He would fight for his father and die for his mother. If needs be. He didn't have to have secrets. There was a man to confide in—a man who understood and who had not forgotten his own boyhood. He was not driven to the streets for companionship, for no place contained so much hallowed pleasure as home.

And John A. Mooney grew up to be a strong, able, kindly charitable man, respected and honored. The death of his parents wrung his heart. He scattered flowers on their graves and lived as they had lived.

It is all in John A. Mooney's will. He was a good son.

What greater tribute can be paid him?
